

Research School for Operations
Management and Logistics

Complexity in supply chains

Dennis Schol – Eindhoven University of Technology

My research focuses on the supply chain of a manufacturer like ASML, which has hundreds of direct suppliers. These suppliers also are dependent on other suppliers. This network of suppliers is vulnerable because when one supplier is delayed ASML cannot finish their machines in time. I try to model the network of and the interactions between suppliers by using for example mean field games and queueing theory.